Summer Reading

Q: Why should I read during my vacation time?

A: Lots of reasons!

- ◇ Avoid the summer slide. Research shows that if you read something—anything—over the summer, you can maintain (and in some cases even improve!) your reading skills. But, if you don't read in the summer months, you can lose up to several months of reading skills. Don't waste all the hard work you put in this year by letting your skills slip!
- ◇ Be a part of a reading community. Readers make connections and have great conversations. When you return in the fall, you'll have opportunities to celebrate and share your reading with your classmates.

Your schools aren't the only place to get involved in a reading community. The Waterford Public Library has summer reading programs for children, teens, and even adults. Visit www.waterfordpubliclibrary.org and get your whole family reading, talking, and earning prizes!
- ◇ Have fun! A good book can carry you away to other worlds. It can teach you new skills, spark conversations, and let you exercise your imagination muscles.

Q: What should I read?

A: Read whatever interests you. The choice is yours!

- ◇ Maybe there's something you've been meaning to read for a while now. Now's your chance. Maybe you want to read that new bestseller before the movie comes out. Or, maybe you loved a movie and can't wait until the sequel comes out. Read to find out what happens next!
- ◇ If you aren't sure what you want to read, seek advice. Talk with someone you trust. Family, friends, teachers, and librarians are always great resources. So are organizations like the American Library Association (ALA). Each year, the ALA releases updated lists of recommendations and award-winners.

Q : Where can I find something to read?

A : Good reading material is all around you!

- ◇ Mason and Pierce Middle School: Thanks to a generous grant from the Waterford Foundation, each middle school has lots of copies of popular titles available for you to check out. Please contact your middle school ELA teacher with questions about how and when to check these books out.
- ◇ Waterford Public Library: The Waterford Public Library has an extensive collection of books for middle school readers. And did you know that if you are looking for a title that they don't have in their building, they can order it from another library? You can even check out digital copies of books for e-readers. All for free! Visit them at 5168 Civic Center Drive. One of their librarians would love to help you find a book to fall in love with this summer!
- ◇ Michigan e-Library: MeL.org has a wealth of resources for online reading including FREE access to online magazines, audiobooks, and more! Check it out at: <http://teens.mel.org/MeLReadingZone>
- ◇ Online Book Stores: Websites like amazon.com and thriftbooks.com have a large selection of books available for purchase—often at great prices.

Pernille Ripp is a middle school teacher in Wisconsin and an author of books about teaching including Passionate Learners, Reimagining Literacy through Global Collaboration, and coming this summer, Passionate Readers—the Art of Reaching and Engaging Every Child. She also blogs about her practice as a teacher, and with her students’ help, keeps up-to-date recommendations of books for middle school students. Her recommended lists for middle school readers can be found at <https://pernillesripp.com/our-favorite-books/>.

When selecting a book, it is important to remember that many recommended titles may provoke readers to think about issues that are relevant to teenagers and young adults, which means that they may contain language, violence, or mature situations. If you are concerned about these, it may be helpful to discuss your selection with your family and/or teacher to help you choose a book that is appropriate for you.
